As home to the region's highest density of infrastructure, employment, city and county offices, transportation nodes and a central hub for 1.5 million people in the region, Downtown Jacksonville, is perfectly positioned to become the nucleus for making Northeast Florida a sustainable region.

Terry Lorince, Executive Director of Downtown Vision, will discuss what makes a downtown environment inherently green, what the opportunities and challenges are and what Downtown Vision is doing to help encourage sustainability in Downtown Jacksonville. Terry has over 20 years of experience in the field of economic development with fifteen years of specialization in the field of Downtown Revitalization. Prior to coming to Jacksonville, she was the Deputy Executive Director of the Pittsburgh Downtown Partnership, a city that completely transformed its downtown in the last decade.

Lori Thomas, with Element National Management, manages the AT&T Tower in downtown Jacksonville. Her and her staff embarked on "greening" their facility about two years ago. She will share some of what they have learned, the challenges they faced and where they are going from here. She will also report informally on her discussions with other downtown building managers and what they see as the biggest challenges and opportunities to greening their buildings.
