The Residential Green Building Committee (RGBC) is committed to educating the public and residential building industry professionals about high performance, affordable, third-party certified green building rating systems, guidelines, and best practices in FL.

RESIDENTIAL GREEN BUILDING: Comparison of certification programs and case studies of new and existing homes

PRESENTED BY: JASON T HUDDLESTON, Hudd Construction
DAVID REED, Conservation Coordinator, JEA
PAUL NICHOLSON, President, Seaside Endeavors

JASON T HUDDLESTON is a Certified Building Contractor, and Journeyman Electrician. Prior to becoming a green builder, Jason noticed excess waste on construction sites, and wanted to make a difference. Jason joined forces with Bryce Development who is building one of the few LEED Certified neighborhoods in Florida.

DAVID REED is a Conservation Coordinator for JEA's Conservation Programs. David has 16 years experience in the engineering and construction fields. He is a state certified Class 1 Energy Rater, a Certified Energy Manager and is also a certification agent for a number of state and national green building programs.

PAUL NICHOLSON is a retired Chief Engineer in the U.S. Merchant Marine who carried a want-to-find-out-how-to-do-it-better attitude into a home remodeling business in 2005. Currently involved with Seaside Endeavors, LLC. and Blue Planet Solutions, LLC, Paul is talking, working and learning everyday about better, more efficient ways to power and enjoy a 21st century life.
